By HENRY T. GORRELL

ALEXANDRIA, July 24.—(BUP)—The Axis-held port of Matruh on the north Egyptian coast has been wrecked and made useless to the enemy. Royal Navy sources disclosed today.

British warships, which enemy propaganda broadcasts once described as firing through the Suez canal, have attacked Matruh repeatedly and hurled more than 2,000 shells into the harbor.

There have been no reports of bombardments of the port since July 11, with naval planes participating in the attacks on harbor works and enemy ships, several of which have been destroyed.

NO GAIN FOR ITALIANS
British sources said as a result the Italian fleet has been unable to gain any advantage from the capture of Matruh by Nazi Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's land forces.

The warships thoroughly blasted shoreworks and harbor installations, and at least one tank ship and one lighter were sunk in the harbor.

When Matruh was attacked in the first of the massive series of bombardments a large Axis ammunition dump was hit by both aerial bombs and shells, causing it to blow up.

Warships supported by naval aircraft attacked enemy coastal communications in northern Egypt again Wednesday night, it was disclosed. Areas as far west as Matruh were shelled but results were uncertain because of poor visibility and low clouds.

FACE HEAVY FIRE
Bombardments at Matruh have been carried out in the face of the heaviest fire from the enemy's shore batteries with warships continuing to lay down a heavy concentration barrage and dumping their shells by the score on Axis targets.

Enemy E-boats, the pilots said, have not been active in meeting the British naval units, usually steering away to safety behind smoke screens.

British Blast Nazi Guns Off Desert Ridge

By RICHARD D. McILLAN WITH BRITISH TANKS IN THE EL ALAMEIN BATTLE

July 24.—(BUP)—A midnight volcanic rumble, rare and abrupt on the desert, was the sound of the bombers and the crash of the stars fills the air. The flare of star shells and the crimson streaks of the rockets, colored trails light the sky.

That is the nightly phase of the battle for Egypt—a battle which rumbles night and day along the Alamein position with the British tanks, infantry and air forces. In this battle the British have been unequalled in the use of heavy weapons, and the night attacks on the Axis have been the most brilliant of the campaign.

As I write, the enemy units are signaling each other along their line while the anti-aircraft fire frantically to ward off the attention of the British night raiders who are keeping their rendezvous with the Axis tanks and armor.

SUFFER SOME LOSSES
The British Imperials have made progress but with losses. The Imperial force, which has been used methodically to attack the Axis positions, has been hit on the western tip of the Alamein ridge from where they could sweep the desert but the combined action of the British artillery and infantry blasted them off the ridge and the Imperials swept on beyond two or three miles, to the next hill.

This hummock—it really can scarcely be called a hill—had been converted by the Germans into a desert bastion, studded by machine guns and heavy anti-aircraft guns.

The British tanks three times at the German defenses. They got through again and again. They were not so fortunate against the anti-tank barrage and the machine gun fire.

Nazis Claim Rostov City Is Captured

By GRANT DEXTER
The Hitler command claimed today capture of Rostov, capital of the northern Caucasus, on the main railway and pipeline which tap the oil and mineral wealth of the deep Caucasus, and the Russians, while not acknowledging the claim, said the battle had reached the city gates.

Quickly the Germans followed this up with an assertion that resistance within the Don bend had been broken.

Moscow dispatches said, however, that the Red army had taken a last ditch stand on the lower Don and were developing a flank attack against the east wing of the German indentation in the Tsimliansk region, about 100 miles between Rostov and Stalingrad.

AIR FORCE HITS NAZIS
From the wording of the Moscow dispatches, it was clear that the Red air force was still a power in Caucasian skies, "inflicting continuous blows on enemy formations and communications, as the communists put it.

The Russian stand on the Don indicated a determination to hold the Tikhoretsk-Stalingrad railway, which roughly parallels the course of the lower Don between Rostov and Stalingrad, an air line distance of 150 miles.

"Tikhoretsk, south of Rostov, is at the junction of this railway and the north-south line from Rostov into the Caucasus. The Germans at this Tsimliansk position, only about 35 miles from the Stalingrad-Tikhoretsk line.

ALARM OF CLAIM
The German high command used a special communique to proclaim the capture of Rostov. An occasion calling for a multi-lingual trumpeting and rolling of drums on the German radio, Berlin, stand and device to call attention to special victory claims and gain maximum publicity.

The Rostov situation and developments in the Caucasus, including a sharp message to Stalingrad, an industrial center to the Don bend, constituted a mighty thrust to Russia's southern link with Allied forces in the Middle East.

Outlines Plans

OTTAWA, July 24.—(CP)—The House of Commons last night gave third reading by 141 votes to 45 to the government bill to permit conscription for overseas service by order-in-council.

The bill now goes to the Senate and when it has been finally approved by parliament and given royal assent, the government may, if it believes conditions require it, have men called for compulsory military service made liable for overseas service by order-in-council.

C.C.F. Members Vote Against
The C.C.F. party members, led by M. J. Coldwell, house leader, voted against a third reading of the bill, although a few minutes before they had voted against an amendment by J. S. Roy (Ind., Gaspe) which would have had the effect of giving the bill a six months' hold.

The vote rejecting the Roy amendment was 150 to 37. During the closing debate of the bill, Prime Minister Mackenzie King said he was afraid to go to the country at any time as he thought he knew the confidence the people had in him.

Conservative House Leader Hanson, in his final address on the bill, urged that Canadians unite without regard to political views in this time of danger.

Earlier, Hon. P. J. A. Cardin, former minister of public works and transport, who left the cabinet because of the policy on overseas conscription, said Quebec would "submit" to the law when it was approved, as it recognized the sovereignty and majority of the people of Canada. He warned, however, that a majority should use its power as kindly as possible.

In the vote on the main motion to give the bill third reading, Quebec Liberals and members of the C.C.F. represented the main opposition.

The C.C.F. has opposed the bill on the grounds that conscription of wealth and industry should be applied simultaneously with the conscription of manpower.

GALLERIES WELL FILLED
The house and galleries were well filled as the prime minister defended the measure on conscription.

Mr. King spoke immediately after Conservative House Leader Hanson had finished a speech with a plea for forgetting political party differences and for a union of forces to win the war. It was Mr. Hanson's second full speech on Bill 80 in two days.

Mr. King said that if the people did not have confidence in the leader of a government the sooner he stepped down the better.

He reiterated his intention of making sure that a vote of confidence in the government was given. Continued on Page 7, Col. 1

The German drive to Rostov, which, perhaps, already has failed, exposes the northern part of the Caucasus and the oil fields on the near side of the mountains, and the danger of German occupation.

It is true that the Germans took Rostov some time ago, but they were driven out in the Russian counter-attack late in 1941, but the Russians lost it again in 1942, it seems probable that they will take it again this year. For one thing, the Germans are attacking in far greater force than last year.

They are concentrating the mightiest army they have yet used in the war in the comparatively limited area between Voronezh and the lower reaches of the Don, a stretch of less than 200 miles. It seems probable that Marshal Smolton, Timoshenko, and other Soviet commanders are attacking in far greater force than last year.

ABOARD U. S. SEAPLANE TENDER IN THE ALEUTIANS, June 25.—(Delayed)—The wind is a wild 70-knot gale hurling whitecaps across the bay, and tonight no planes will be in the air—neither ours nor the Japanese.

The Battle of the Aleutians is not yet over. The Japs are still in Kiska.

But tonight it's all right to think a little and consider how things have gone up and down in the Aleutians. The little tender lay in the harbor on June 3, when the Japanese Mitsubishi first flew over the island, sending Mr. Bayliss, the U.S. Army's first observer, to the beach to see what was going on.

Japs Commit Hari Kari As Tokyo Raided

At that time, there happened to be no defense drill in progress, and the first time in its 2,000 years of history Tokyo rocked under the impact of a surprise attack.

The American aviators concentrated their attack on the Tokyo factory district.

Damage, including that from fire, was described as moderately heavy.

A single plane which flew over the Imperial Palace, in the heart of the city, drew fire from the anti-aircraft guns employed in the city.

Through the plane made no attempt to drop bombs, the mere fact that the plane flew over the palace was reported.

Members of the cabinet led by Gen. Tojo, who was in the prime minister's palace, immediately after the emperor emerged from his apartment and went to his study.

Afterward, information added that there was a severe reorganization of the air defense command.

When it was reported in April that the Japs were inspecting a Tokyo factory, a hammer, thrown by a factor, was reported to have been thrown at the Japs.

According to the rumor, the attack was planned to be a surprise attack on the Japs.

Blamed Tokyo reports were killed in the raid.

According to reports, at least two high army officers killed themselves as penance for "endangering the emperor."

Hull Sketches Broad Program For Betterment Of Man

WASHINGTON, July 24.—(AP)—Following is the text of the broadcast address last night by State Secretary Cordell Hull:

truly won only win it is guarded by the same watchfulness, the same courage, the same willingness to fight for it which first secured it. Repeatedly throughout history men—having won the fight—have squandered precious rights and privileges, which freedom brings—

HULL URGES REFORM

World Advances Planned When Enemy Is Smashed

justice that to be truly free, men must have, as well, economic freedom and economic security—the assurance for all alike of an opportunity to work as free men in the company of free men, to obtain through work the material and spiritual means of life to advance through the exercise of ability, initiative and enterprise, to make provision against the hazards of human existence.

TO BE MET SPEEDILY

We know that this is a true of mankind everywhere. We know that in all countries, there has been—and there will be increasingly in the future—demand for a forward movement of social justice. Each of us must be convinced that once a war is won, this demand shall be met as speedily and as fully as possible.

All these advances—in political freedom, in economic betterment, in social justice, in spiritual value—can be achieved by each nation primarily through its own work and effort, mainly through its own policies and actions.

There can be made only when there is acceptance and cultivation of the concepts and the spirit of human rights and human freedom.

It is impossible for any nation or group of nations to prescribe the methods or provide the means by which any other nation can accomplish or maintain its own political and economic independence, be strong, prosper and attain high spiritual goals. It is possible, however, for all nations to give and to receive help.

ELIMINATE IMPEDIMENTS

That which nations can and must do, toward helping one another is to take, by co-operative action, steps for the elimination of impediments and obstructions which prevent the full use by each—of the welfare of its people—of the energy and resources which are at its command. And the nations can and must, again by co-operative action under common agreement, create such facilities as will enable each to increase the effectiveness of its own national efforts.

Such co-operative action is already under way. Twenty-eight United Nations have proclaimed their adherence to a program of principles and purposes by which mankind may advance toward higher standards of national and international conduct. That program is embodied in the declaration made on Aug. 14, 1941, by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill, now known as the Atlantic Charter.

The pledge of the Atlantic Charter is of a system which will give every nation, large or small, a greater assurance of stable peace, greater opportunity for the realization of its aspirations to freedom, and greater facilities for material advancement, that which pledge implies that each nation should strive to demonstrate its capacity for stable and progressive government, to fulfill scrupulously its established duties to other nations, to settle its international differences and disputes by non-violent methods, and to make its full contribution to the maintenance of enduring peace.

SHADOW OF WAR

For decades, all nations have lived in the shadow of threatened aggression or war. This has impeded building of armament, which in the case of many nations has absorbed as large a part of their production effort as to leave the remainder of their resources inadequate for maintaining, let alone improving, the economic, social and cultural standards of their people. Closely related to this has been a burden, less obvious but of immense weight—the inevitable limitation that fear of human impotence in productive activity. Many men, groups of men and even nations have dared not plan, create or increase the means of production, fearing lest war come and their efforts thus be rendered vain.

No nation can make satisfactory progress while its citizens are in the state of mutual fear of external attack or interference. It is plain that some international agency must be created which can—by force, if necessary—keep the peace among nations in the future.

There must be international co-operative action to set up the mechanisms which can in such unique peace. This must include eventual adjustment of national armaments in such a manner that the rule of law can not be indefinitely challenged by the force of armaments which can be reduced to a minimum.

Settlement of disputes by peaceful means, and indeed all processes of international co-operation, presuppose respect for law and obligations. It is plain that one of the institutions which must be established and be given vitality is an international court of justice. It is equally clear that, in the process of re-establishing international order, the United Nations must exercise surveillance over aggressive nations until such time as the latter demonstrate their willingness and ability to live at peace with other nations.

How long such a surveillance will need to continue must depend upon the rapidly with which the people of Germany, Japan, Italy and their satellites give convincing proof that they have repudiated and abandoned the monstrous philosophy of superior race and conquest by force, and have embraced loyalty to the basic principles of peaceful coexistence. During the formative period of the world organization, peace must be rendered impossible.

One of the greatest of all impediments which in the past have impeded human progress and afforded breeding grounds for dictators has been extreme nationalism. All will agree that nationalism and its spirit are essential to the healthy and normal political and economic life of a people, but when policies of nationalism—political, economic, social and moral—are carried to such extremes as to exclude and prevent necessary policy of international cooperation, they become dangerous and deadly.

Nationalism, run riot between

ALEXIS SMITH — statuette blonde from the State of Washington — makes the most of the morning hours before the cameras call her. She is prominently cast in Warner's picture of the famous Margaret Kennedy novel, "The Constant Nymph" in which Charles Boyer and Joan Fontaine are starred. Others in the imposing cast are Brenda Marshall, Charles Coburn, Peter Lorre, Jean Muir, Montagu Love, Edward Ginnell, Joyce Reynolds, Doris Lloyd, Richard Ryan, Joan Blair and Crawford Kent. Edmund Goulding directed "The Constant Nymph."

the last war and this war, defeated all attempts to carry out indispensable measures of international economic and political action; encouraged and facilitated the rise of dictators; and drove the world straight toward the present war.

During this period narrow and short-sighted nationalism found its most virulent expression in the economic field. It prevented goods and services from flowing in volume at all adequate from nation to nation, and thus severely hampered the work of production, distribution and consumption, and greatly retarded efforts for social betterment.

No nation can make satisfactory progress when it is deprived, by its own action or by the action of others, of the immeasurable benefits of international exchange of goods and services. The Atlantic Charter declares the right of all nations to access on equal terms to the trade and to the raw materials of the world which are needed for their economic prosperity. This is essential in the legitimate and growing demand for the greatest practicable measure of stable employment is to be met, accompanied by rising standards of living.

If the actual and potential losses resulting from limitations on economic activity are to be eliminated, a system must be provided by which this can be assured.

In order to accomplish this, and to establish among the nations a circle of mutual benefit, reciprocal trade barriers of the many different kinds must be reduced, and practices which impose injuries on others and divert trade from its natural economic course must be avoided. Equally plain is the need for making national currencies more freely exchangeable for each other at stable rates of exchange; for a system of financial relations so devised that materials can be produced and ways may be found of moving them where there are markets created by human need; for machinery through which capital may flow for the development of the world's resources and for the stabilization of economic activity; move on equitable terms from financially weaker countries. There may be need for some special trade arrangements and for international agreements to handle difficult and plus problems and to meet situations in special areas.

GUIDED BY CAUTION

These are only some of the things that nations can attempt to do as continuous discussions and experience instruct the judgment. There are bound to be many others. But the new policies should always be guided by cautious and sound judgment, lest we make new errors in place of old ones and create new conditions.

Building for the future in the economic sphere thus means that each nation must give solid and really to programs of social and economic progress by augmenting production and using the greater output for the increase of social welfare, but not permitting it to be diverted or absorbed by special interests, private or public.

It also means that each nation must play its full part in a system of world relations designed to facilitate the production and movement of goods in response to human needs. With peace among nations reasonably assured, with political stability established, with economic shackles removed, a vast fund of resources will be released in each nation to meet the needs of progress, to make possible for all the people an advancement toward higher living standards, to invigorate the constructive forces of initiative and enterprise.

The nations of the world will then be able to go forward in the manner of their own choosing in all avenues of human betterment, free from the fetters and shackles of their own efforts and with complete self-respect.

SOUND LOGICAL ROAD

Continued self-development of nations and individuals in a framework of effective cooperation with others is the sound and logical road to the higher standards of life which we all crave and seek.

No nation will find this easy. Neither victory nor any form of post-war settlement will of itself create a millennium. Rather, we must be offered an opportunity to eliminate vast obstacles and wastes, to make available additional means of advancement and intercourse (standards); to create new facilities whereby the natural resources of the earth and the products of human hands and brains can be more effectively utilized for the promotion of human welfare.

To make full use of this opportunity, we must be reunited, alone to proclaim the blessings and benefits which we all alike desire for humanity, but to find the mechanisms by which they may be most fully and most speedily attained and be most effectively safeguarded.

The manifold tasks that lie ahead will not be met by hasty action. There will be need for plans, developed with careful consideration and carried forward boldly and vigorously. The vision, the resolution, and the skill with which the conditions of peace will be established and developed after the war will be as much a measure of man's capacity for freedom and progress as the fervor and determination which men show in winning the victory.

PROCLAIM VISIONS

Without impediment to the fullest prosecution of the war—indeed, for its most effective prosecution—the United Nations should from time to time, as they did in adopting the Atlantic Charter, formulate and proclaim their common vision regarding fundamental policies which will chart for mankind a wise course based on enduring spiritual values.

In support of such policies, an informed public opinion must be developed. This is a task of intensive study, hard thinking, broad vision and leadership—not for government alone, but for parents and teachers, and clergymen, and all those within each nation, who provide spiritual, moral, and intellectual guidance.

Never did so great and so compelling a duty in this respect devolve upon those who are in position of responsibility, public and private.

DRIVE FOR VICTORY

For the immediate present, the all-important issue is that of winning the war—winning it decisively. Into that we must put our utmost effort—now and every day until victory is won.

A bitter armed attack on human beings has aroused mankind to new heights of courage, determination and moral strength. It has evoked a spirit of work, sacrifice and co-operative effort. With that strength and with that spirit we shall win.

Canadian-Built Catalina Ready For First Test

VANCOUVER, July 24.—(CP)—Technical experts today were swarming over the first Catalina flying boat built by Boeing Aircraft at its Sea Island factory near Vancouver, preparing the big seaplane monoplane for her first flying test Monday, when she will be christened "Ahtum" by Mrs. W. C. Woodward, wife of the lieutenant-governor of British Columbia.

Close on the broad tail of the big boat, known as hull one and the first amphibian of Boeing's 34-acre Vancouver factory, is hull two, nearly finished and beyond await a line of Catalina hulls echoing to the river's hammer.

Miss Pearl McKenzie, 25-year-old factory matron, and first woman riveter employed in production work, will dedicate hull one on behalf of the employees.

P. G. Johnson, president of Boeing Aircraft Company, Seattle, and Ralph P. Bell of Ottawa, director-general of aircraft production, will attend the christening ceremony.

PLENTY OF DELAYS

Since construction of its Vancouver plant was started on a bare meadow at Sea Island 21 months ago, the Boeing plant has had plenty of production delays. The Japanese upset plans for output when they started war in the Pacific last December, because the United States' entry into the war halted delivery of flying boat components which Boeing of Canada had contracted to import from Japan.

The Sea Island plant is now tooling to produce the entire aircraft, exclusive of engines and patented instruments.

Grants To Schools Not Revoked In Harvest Closing

REGINA, July 24.—(CP)—Schools in Saskatchewan that have been closed for work in the harvest field, or close school for such a period, or order opening until after harvest will not be penalized by loss of the federal and provincial grants of the department of education said on Thursday.

Jap Labor For Alberta Farms Being Studied

CALGARY, July 24.—(CP)—Possibility of hiring Japanese from British Columbia to work on Alberta farms, because of a shortage in the local labor force, is being investigated by the U.F.A. Albert Gardiner, president, said yesterday.

"There is not even enough labor in the province at the present time to put up the hay crop," Mr. Gardiner said. "What are we going to do when we start harvesting the grain crop?"

JAPS' BEST BET

"The Japs look like the best bet," he continued. "There are prejudices against these people, but it looks like we will have to use them. From information I have received from boot growers in southern Alberta, I understand that they are well suited to the work. They find the Japs splendid workers."

To discuss the labor question, a conference was held recently by representatives of various farm organizations with W. H. Ross, manager of the Calgary office of the Unemployment Insurance Commission, as chairman. Organizations represented included the Alberta Wheat Pool, the United Grain Growers, the United Farmers of Alberta, the Line Elevator Association and the Alberta Federation of Agriculture.

GRASS CO-OPERATION

The meeting decided to get the provincial department of agriculture, which has a staff of 17 field servicemen, to seek the co-operation of municipal councils in assessing the amount of labor available in the various municipalities. It was suggested that arrangements might be made to transfer available help to places where it was needed.

BATTLE SCENE FROM ALEUTIANS

Catalina Flying Boats Destroy Jap Ship At Kiska

Pretty Australian girl's non-too-subtle hint keeps conversation safely in non-military channels as she greets U.S. soldiers en route to camp down under.

Death of a Jap ship in Kiska harbor when eight Catalina flying boats dumped six tons of explosives on enemy ships last month, is graphically shown in this photograph taken during the height of the battle. One ship is burning fiercely after a direct hit and encircled are three other Jap ships speeding away out of the path of the U.S. bombers that poured tons of bombs into the harbor. During the engagement one 500-pound bomb fell squarely on a light cruiser. Another dropped alongside a transport, close enough to make serious underwater damage a certainty.

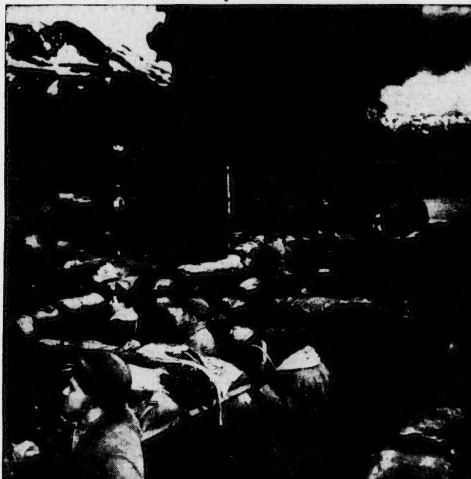

Mrs. Ninon Belle and her daughter, Aloma Cherie, two Americans left their home in New York six months ago to travel to England to join the W.A.A.F. They are now in training together at a depot near London. Photo shows Mrs. Belle reading a letter from home to her 17-year-old daughter, Aloma. They are both teleprinters in a Fighter Command station.

Production Pattern

Doing its share in United Nations' titanic struggle to wrest mastery of the seas from Axis foes, Los Angeles firm lines up row on row of giant ship ventilators in striking pattern of war production.

Marine Reception Committee

Jap fliers succeeded in setting the oil tank, background, afire in their June 3 raid on Dutch Harbor, Alaska, but these U.S. Marines would like to see the Japs try to come down and fight it out. Leathernecks are ready and waiting for them at their trench stations. Navy just released photo.

Closes Up

The strong bond of friendship between the United States and Finland, stretched thin by the war, was close to the breaking point when the photo above was taken in Washington. It shows Finnish Minister Hjalmar J. Procope giving telephone instructions to his consuls to close their offices in the U.S. by Aug. 1 on Uncle Sam's orders.

C'est La Guerre!

Unless you are a psychologist, the above picture will not interest you. Its only purpose is to show the present trend of stage shows in London and New York. For some reason the war has brought a terrific demand for the "Follies" strip type of show. The trio above are from the revue "Star and Garter" which is now playing Broadway with the sign "Standing room only" hung out nearly every night at the box office.

Keeping In Trim

Joan Leslie—a baseball enthusiast—does some practicing while away from the mikes in order to improve her not-so-bad batting average. Recently starred with Henry Fonda in Warners' uproarious "The Male Animal" she will be seen next with Ida Lupino, Dennis Morgan and Jack Carson in "The Hard Way".

The men who flew the Catalinas until they beat back the Japs went on until they were dropping from fatigue. They went out on missions which were almost hopeless and some of them never came back. These men battling the Japs in the North Pacific fought on until their planes were too tattered to fly or they ran out of fuel. Photo above shows bombs in wing racks of a flying boat.

Free French

Looking down the barrel of this gun is a Free French girl attached to the Free French motor transport corps as a driver. The girls are now receiving rifle instruction.

Tether

Alexis Smith—slim, blue-eyed and statuesque—smilingly poses for the cameraman in the midst of a tether ball game on the sands somewhere near Hollywood. The lovely Alexis will be seen next in a prominent role in Warners' "The Constant Nymph".

British Welcome Yanks

To avoid as much as possible the misunderstandings that arose between Tommy Atkins and Johnny Doughboy when they were brothers in arms during the last war, both Britain and the United States have issued booklets for American service men stationed in the British Isles. The above picture shows the cover of the British booklet which explains the many confusing situations that may face a Yank in the embattled isles.
